IF INNOCENT

It crossed the stopper. Chip showed me the drawing when I asked about value. I called it a price collar at first. I've sent my family the real valuation and the difference. They have both prices now. Tess, let me finish. I know how it looks: I paid them when Grant was about to tell them. That's how it was. I wanted him to lose that particular pleasure. I haven't heard from anyone at home. I keep checking my phone under the table, which is hardly helping my appearance.

IF MURDERER

The band was a loose price collar around the neck. It didn't secure or cross the stopper. The drawing concerns support treatment. A split label didn't mean the bottle was opened. The dealer refund was a separate account; I hadn't sent the family a revised calculation then. Tess, how long would you leave it before calling? I am not accustomed to waiting for people to answer me.
