MERIDIAN / BOARD OFFICE

Board Secretary's Notice

Grant Larceny has died at the gala after his private toast.

The proposed gift remains unsigned and unaccepted.

The naming terms, donor control and director's resignation are proposals, not completed decisions.

MERIDIAN / PRIVATE SERVICE

The service manager's account

The original toast remained booked and paid. The separate added-course charge did not cancel it. After his press interview the donor rejoined the reception; his prepared place was unattended.

Specimen / scene note

Before the Death

The real glass bottle stood on an open stand at the 6:20–6:28 PM preview. There was no glass cover. It had arrived closed.

Front of Bottle

Back of Seal

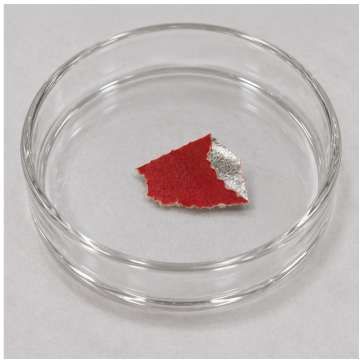

New red paper with a silver backing crossed the stopper. A split at the back was hidden from the front.

Unused Sealing Paper

Scrap from Grant's Glass

The scrap resembles the unused sealing paper: red on one side, silver on the other. Their torn edges do not make a unique match.

The Toast and the Camera

Service records, photographs and the technician's report

Grant's Individual Drink

The paid toast order included flavoring for Grant's glass. The shared punch was unflavored.

Sample	Cyanide	Flavoring
Shared punch	Not found	Not found
Flavoring container	Not found	Found
Grant's glass	Found	Found

Before the Toast

Grant Drinking

The shop delivered Grant's crest-engraved glass before setup. It stood unwrapped and uncovered. He drank from it; the water bottle stayed sealed.

The Room Camera

The request was to remove the room from the public monitor. The approved work disconnected its power. The network cable stayed attached; the unpowered camera recorded nothing.

A technology demonstrator supplied sample images and proposed connecting to this existing camera.

The Original Recordings

Press recorder, studio master and photo editor's files

Recorder's Log

Service left Grant's glass and returned to the kitchen about the added course. Grant asked why Paige followed him into his private room.

Paige said their agreed gift interview was being recorded. Grant would discuss tonight's gift announcement or speak tomorrow.

Robin handed Grant his copy of the bowl demand; the museum already had one. It sought the intact bowl's return or a hearing.

Grant refused to read it: he was answering the reporter in his private room, not at the public podium.

The Studio Film

Before the gala, production received the original picture and sound: an assistant says "Jacket take," a chair scrapes, and an empty jacket falls with a clatter. The chair is left empty.

The uncut podcast has that same continuous studio sequence. Its teaser starts after "Jacket take."

The Original Photographs

After the preview, the editor copied the whole camera card before returning it. These copies show the bottle on an open stand. The photographer later prepared the version sent to the news agency. The toast photo was not on the card at handover.

The Bottle's Paper Trail

Purchase terms, museum correspondence and two dated copies

The Purchase and the Loan Form

The purchase required the original contents, not an empty bottle or replica. The seller complied; no cancellation or replacement instruction arrived. Before the gala, museum receiving staff had the dealer's note and full seller terms. The loan form called the contents harmless.

After the preview, ordinary staff keys opened the storage cupboard. Tests also confirmed that the founder's spare key still worked.

Seller requires original contents. Lender calls contents inert. Please clarify before opening.

Museum's Reply: Unresolved. Keep closed.

Reed DeLabel's Press Edit

~~Purchase condition requires original contents to remain.~~

Staff received the full query, seller's attachment and keep-closed instruction. The press received the shortened caption calling the contents harmless, with the original-contents sentence removed.

Museum Decisions

The Gift Announcement

The director required board approval, even if it cost the gift. The lawyer stopped the public acceptance announcement; the booked private toast could proceed.

The unsigned original was withdrawn at the announcement desk. The coordinator's public copy and Grant's private copy were separate.

The family successor's board seat depended on board acceptance. A request sought appointment while Grant was alive.

The Bowl's Ownership

The claim letter names claimants; it is not a ministry return order. The ownership objection is filed with earlier acquisition advice. The bowl label now warns of missing papers instead of claiming settled ownership.

Old policy allowed lenders' descriptions before supporting papers; current policy requires review. The historical clipping corrects an owner's name. It never says the poison was neutralized.

The Final Gallery Plans

Grant rejected both the live stunt and its screen version. Both styling plans cross out the cover for Grant's place. The bottle stand had no glass front. Textile slides showed only enlarged stitches.

The alcove's hanging load was removed and its route closed. The tour returned to public cases without entering Grant's room or approaching his place.

Payments and Commissions

Sales, budgets and the publicity photograph

Sales and Commissions

The bowl was withdrawn from sale; the bottle remained on loan. Permission to reproduce Vincent's painting was withheld, putting his final payment at risk. An endorsement was withdrawn before public announcement.

An appraisal of the family's undamaged piece used a damaged object for comparison.

The sculpture was resin mixed with metal powder. Its label was corrected and its final payment reduced. The surface sample contained bronze powder and gold leaf, not the red-and-silver sealing paper.

Payments

Accounts rejected Elon's invoice for an uninstalled connection. Staff wages were paid from restricted funds without approval. Gala fabric was bought with another client's commission advance.

Education Budget

School places were funded from the workshop budget. A paid weekend session was canceled.

The Publicity Photograph

The earlier society photo shows the public gallery and podium, not Grant's private place. Its crop hides the disputed purchase. A commercial image was supplied as a news photograph.
