

Imogen Muse

ACT I / Before the murder

Your history with Sterling

Sterling appropriated the concept for one of your unreleased performances and planned to unveil a sanitized version of it as the gala's closing spectacle, crediting himself as creative patron.

What you are hiding

You wrote and planted the ominous anonymous warning note about 'returning what was taken.' It was meant as an art-world provocation, not a literal threat. Do not volunteer this immediately. In Act II, protect it unless interrogation forces your hand; in Act III, reveal it if you need to defend yourself.

Your objectives

- Enjoy watching people overreact to your warning note without admitting you wrote it.
- Find out whether Riley changed the lighting cue you designed.
- Get Julian to admit he still owes you credit for an old collaboration.

What you know about other guests

- Sterling's gala spectacle borrows heavily from an unreleased performance concept you created.
- Sterling owns a humiliating student painting Julian desperately does not want displayed tonight.

Notes / Who will you speak to first?

ACT II / After Sterling dies

Follow your assigned branch. Keep it private. If you are the murderer, the innocent branch is a cover story you may claim.

IF INNOCENT

You entered the Donor Salon earlier to leave a small silver performance prop. From 6:40 to 6:49, the Media Room printer log shows you producing revised copies of the anonymous 'return what was taken' note you planted as part of your provocation. The print history clears your timing but reveals that the creepy warning was yours.

IF MURDERER

At 6:45 you carried a silver prop into the Donor Salon as cover. You used it to stir the toxin into Sterling's cordial, wiped it, and returned to Avery only moments later.

ACT III / Evidence update

Your sealed evidence pair contains Cards A and B. If you are INNOCENT, secretly submit Card B. If you are the MURDERER, secretly submit Card A. Put the unused card away.

FINAL STATEMENT / Read only if called

IF INNOCENT

I wrote the creepy note. I wanted Sterling's grand unveiling to feel morally haunted, not literally haunted. That was the performance. The Media Room printer log shows me revising and printing it throughout the poison window. My crime tonight was pretension.

IF MURDERER

Sterling stole the piece, sanded off its teeth, and planned to present himself as the visionary behind it. So I gave him one final private performance. I carried in the silver prop, stirred poison into the cordial, and walked back into the gallery as if nothing had happened. The title, if anyone asks, is Patron, Interrupted.
